The Origins Institute is hosting the 2023 IPPW

The Institut Origines, aiming at investigating how the genesis of planetary systems could lead to the emergence of life, is hosting the 20th International Planetary Probe Workshop from Aug 26th to Sept 1st 2023, in Marseille.

The International Planetary Probe Workshop is an international conference gathering scientists and engineers with academic and industrial backgrounds working towards building planetary probes to explore the Solar System. The IPPW is held annually between the USA and Europe, since 2003.

This year, the workshop will be held in Marseille.

The IPPW Objectives:

- ❖ Review the scientific knowledge, mission concepts, and technological aspects related to the in-situ robotic exploration of the Solar System using probes and landers.
- ❖ Share ideas, future mission opportunities, emerging technologies and methodologies.
- ❖ Foster international collaborations between the scientific and engineering communities, as well as industrials interested in getting involved with planetary probes and landers.
- ❖ Have early-career scientists and engineers interact with more experienced professionals specialized in spacecraft entry, descent, landing, as well as operating instrumentations in planetary atmospheres and surfaces.

Previous IPPW editions:

- ❖ IPPW 2003, Lisbon, Portugal
- ❖ IPPW 2004, Mountain View, California
- ❖ IPPW 2005, Anavyssos, Attica, Greece
- ❖ IPPW 2006, Pasadena, California
- ❖ IPPW 2007, Bordeaux, France
- ❖ IPPW 2008, Atlanta, Georgia
- ❖ IPPW 2010, Barcelona, Spain
- ❖ IPPW 2011, Portsmouth, Virginia
- ❖ IPPW 2012, Toulouse, France
- ❖ IPPW 2013, San Jose, California
- ❖ IPPW 2014, Pasadena, California
- ❖ IPPW, 2015, Cologne, Germany
- ❖ IPPW, 2016, Laurel, Maryland
- ❖ IPPW, 2017, The Hague, The Netherlands
- ❖ IPPW, 2018, Boulder, Colorado
- ❖ IPPW, 2019, Oxford, UK
- ❖ IPPW, 2020, Webinar
- ❖ IPPW, 2021, Webinar
- ❖ IPPW, 2022, Santa Clara, California

By winning the call to host the IPPW, the Origins Institute will bring to Aix-Marseille University and the local industrial environment a significant international reach.

The national and international aerospace industrials, as well as the space agency representatives will be attending the IPPW near the Aix-Marseille university headquarters at the Palais du Pharo in Marseille. The ministers involved in space exploration will be invited.

The local region is filled with industrials that hold a strategic position with respect to space exploration.

The IPPW is an event not to be missed.
